IOSH in 60 seconds

The Institution of Occupational Safety and Health is the Chartered body for health and safety professionals. With more than 40,000 individual members working in 85 countries, we're the biggest professional health and safety organisation in the world. IOSH was founded in 1945 and is a registered charity.

Our members are committed to cutting down the number of people who die or get hurt or ill because of what they do for a living. Across the world, two million people die every year as a result of health and safety failures. In the EU alone, someone dies every three and a half minutes.

Setting the standards

We think that when it comes to health and safety, only advice from qualified, experienced and skilled professionals will do. That's why one of our main roles is to set and maintain high standards. Our range of membership grades is tied to internationally recognised qualification standards and reflects different levels of expertise and experience. Chartered Membership of IOSH is recognised as the hallmark of professional excellence in health and safety.

A voice for health and safety

We speak out on issues that are relevant to millions, from the unique challenges facing teenagers starting their first jobs, to the needs of workers with bad health or disabilities. We don't just point out problems, but come up with solutions too.

Here to help

We're here to help anyone with an interest in getting health and safety management right. That's why we offer a huge range of free web tools, guides and research reports. We also run a free infoline helping more than 4,500 people every year.

Bringing people together

Health and safety is all about sharing lessons learned. We help this happen by staging hundreds of free or low cost events – our local and sector networks bring together thousands of people online and in person every year. We also host a number of high profile conferences and exhibitions.

Developing skills

Health and safety is relevant to everyone. So we not only offer professional level training for our members, we also run courses for business. More than 100,000 managers and staff were trained to our standards in the last year alone. Getting people ready for the working world is critical, so we have a free training course for teenagers and apprentices too.
