Research and development

We're committed to evidence-based practice in workplace health and safety. We've established a Research and Development Fund to support research and inspire innovation as part of our work as a 'thought leader' in health and safety.

The fund encourages:

- research that will be useful in health and safety practice worldwide, and which improves health and safety and public wellbeing
- new ideas that support our strategy and vision of a world of work that is safe, healthy and sustainable.

As well as commissioning and funding research and development projects, we actively support other organisations doing research in occupational safety and health related areas.

We sponsor the British Occupational Health Research Foundation \(BOHRF\), a charity that organises and manages research in occupational health issues, and the Cardiff Work Environment Research Centre \(CWERC\), which carries out research in health and safety, work and well-being and other related subjects.

Why not use our research database to find out about current research in, or related to, occupational safety and health? As well as research, the database can help you find experts to work on other projects or as speakers or trainers.
